

BROOKS DELIVERS SENIOR ADDRESS

O. U. President to Advise Graduates Leaving High School

REV. KERR PREACHES

Annual Senior Play Will Be Presented by Members May 25 and 26

President Stratton D. Brooks of Oklahoma university will deliver the commencement address to the seniors of Central high school this year, it was announced yesterday. Commencement exercises will be held Thursday, June 1.

Rev. W. Kerr, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will preach the annual class day sermon the Sunday preceding. While the detailed announcements concerning the plans for commencement week are not yet ready, a tentative program has been made and the main points outlined. The annual senior play will be presented by the members of the class, under the direction of Miss Ronan, Thursday and Friday, May 25 and 26. At the senior scholarship assembly Friday of that week, scholarship awards will be made to students who have qualified for that distinction. Sunday the students will make their first public appearance as a graduating class when they assemble to hear Reverend Kerr's sermon. Class day exercises will be held Wednesday, May 31, and Doctor Brooks will deliver the commencement address, and the seniors receive their sheepskins Thursday, June 1.

Although this officially ends the year and severs the connection of the seniors with the school, the farewell assembly the next morning always draws its full quota of students. At this time presentation of awards will be made and the 1921-1922 student body has its last get-together meeting of the year.

INVASION INFESTED CATTLE

Adair County Concerned Over Fallure of Quarantine of Neighbor.

Special to The World.

STILLWELL, May 5.—N. A. Harrison, dipping man for this section, was in town this week looking after matters connected with the work. He stated that every precaution was being taken to protect the south border of the county against the cattle of Sequoyah county, which are under rigid quarantine and not to be moved across the line, and any person permitting his cattle to cross the line will suffer the consequences of arrest and having his stock placed under quarantine. At one time Sequoyah county was pronounced clean, but they refused to support even local dipping and quarantine when infested stuff was found, with the result that the federal government placed the line on the county line between this and Sequoyah county.

Since the attempt was made several years ago to clean that county of the tick there has been trouble and hundreds of their cattle have crossed the line into this county uninteruptedly during the grazing season, and the result has been that we are forced to maintain dipping vats where our people are forced to take every precaution to prevent the spread of the deadly tick into this county.

CUSHING, May 5.—Before nearly 100 people, members of his church here, Rev. James P. Peden, pastor of the First Baptist church, called upon members of the church who had been engaged in a whispering campaign against him to prefer their charges in public.

No charges were made and the members in conference voted to exonerate him from any wrong-doing of any sort. A vote of confidence in him was passed and the conference overwhelmingly voted to bend their every effort to aid him in the work of the church.

DONATES TOURIST PARK SITE

Will Be at Once Put in Shape for the Summer's Tourists.

Special to The World.

HELENA, May 5.—C. J. O'Hernett, prominent oil lease operator, and active in chamber of commerce work, has donated a tract of land on a beautiful hill overlooking the city as a tourist park, and will pipe it for water and gas for the accommodation of auto tourists using this route in their overland journey.

The location is plentifully shaded, and of easy access to the city for one needing supplies, and will be put in condition immediately for the summer travel.

CANNOT AFFORD FARM AGENT

But Individuals May Chip In and Pay Salary of Appointee.

Special to The World.

TAT, May 5.—Several citizens petitioned the board of county commissioners here Tuesday for a county farm agent, but their petitions were not granted. The commissioners did not believe that the county was able to appropriate a salary for the agent, for the present.

Several farmers and business men who urged the selection of a county agent have expressed themselves as favorable to paying the salary out of their own pockets. The matter will perhaps come up in June.

PAWBUKA, May 5.—An appropriation of state and county funds is being made in Osage county to the school district. Based on the 1921 school census, each school gets $10.55 per child. The amount to be apportioned at this time totals $127,792.22.

CHAPTER 21.

AN EVENING ALONE—FOR JACK

Helen had been so astonished at Jack's outburst that she was dumb for a moment. He would "get out" if she didn't cook his dinner—"go home!" If he wanted a cook he should have married one (the old plea with women like Helen) and not a girl fond of life, young and good looking. As soon as she recovered from her surprise she told him so.

"Perhaps you're right!" he said, provokingly cool.

"I know I am right. Mother always said I was intended to be a lady, that I wasn't to do menial work."

"I guess mother knew her daughter," Jack spoke sarcastically.

"And if you think I'm going to slave in your kitchen you are mistaken," Helen added with heat.

"No one—that is, no one in their senses would ever expect you to slave anywhere," Jack returned, turning to his work.

"Then I hope you have your senses about you, because if you haven't you are bound to be disappointed."

"See here, Helen, don't you think we have carried this about far enough? You have sulked for two whole days. God knows what about. I'm sure I don't. I suppose you are angry because when I came home and found you still in bed I went around to the corner and got something to eat. After the party you gave, the money it cost, I think, to say the least, you could have the decency to provide something for your husband to eat. You provided liberally enough for your guests."

"How you talk! I provide all I can."

"For others, yes. Now don't talk to me any more. This work has to be done, or no money." He bent over his task.

Helen fussed about the room for a while, then left him alone. He heard her moving about restlessly, and called:

"Do get a book and sit down and read, Helen."

"I don't want to read. I'm going to that picture you wouldn't take me to last night. The Laytons have a friend spending the evening and they asked us to go—I told her I would let them know."

"So that was the cause of her restlessness."

"You know I can't go—and—"

"Oh, I told her you would rather stay at home and moon over a lot of figures than to go out. They can't understand, none of my friends can, how you can be so selfish, never taking me anywhere. They insisted I go anyway. Mr. Barnes is a wonderful dancer and we will go somewhere for supper and dance."

"Mr.—who?"

"Mr. Barnes."

"Oh—so their friend is a man?"

"Yes."

"Well, have a good time, dear, and don't flirt with the poor fellow more than you can help. Don't be too late, will you?"

Rather surprised by Jack's acquiescent spirit, Helen answered more pleasantly than she yet had spoken:

"I'll have to come when the rest do, but I don't imagine we will be very late."

"Very well, run along now and let me work."

Helen looked very sweet when she next appeared. The dress she had bought because of the bridge club, the pretty hat that set so jauntily on her fluffy hair, her trim feet and well-gloved hands all spoke of refinement and good taste. Jack felt a thrill of pride as he looked at her. "She's mine!" he thought. "Mine."

"Will I do?" she asked, with something of her old manner.

"You better believe you will!" he replied heartily.

"Don't work too hard," she dropped a light kiss on his hair. The first caress she had given him for days.

"I'll have to work harder if my wife is to be kept looking as stylish as she does tonight." He drew her head down and kissed her tip. "Remember what I say, and don't break that fellow's heart. And try and get home early. I need my rest if I am ever to get on."

"By-by!" was the only reply Helen made.

Jack sighed once, heavily, then bent to his work.

To be continued.

IDLE MINE RESUMES WORK

Fifty Men Will Be Given Employment Because of Suspension.

ROCKERVILLE, May 5.—The Lucky O. K. mine, one of the properties of the Federal Mining & Smelting Co., after having been idle for a year and a half, has resumed operations, though it is not yet running at full capacity.

It has a very good mill of 300 tons capacity, and was formerly a good producer. When running at full capacity, it will employ about 50 men. P. W. George is superintendent.

COOK AND FEARS TO APPEAL CASE

Not Satisfied With Life Imprisonment, Says Attorney

That Tom W. Cook and Alvin Fears, convicted murderers of Harry Aurandt, who two weeks ago were sentenced to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary, will appeal the findings of the Pawnee county jury to the criminal court of appeals, is the assertion of J. M. Springer, their chief counsel, and he is borne out by records so far made in the case. At the time that the two men were formally sentenced, April 21, after Springer's motion for a new trial had been overruled, he served notice that he would appeal the case.

The notice of intention to appeal has already been served on the court clerk and other county officials. This is the first step in perfecting the appeal. The next is the drawing up of the "case made" and Trial Judge Edmund S. Cole allowed the defense 90 days in which to perfect this part of the procedure. The defense has six months from date of formal sentence in which to file the case before the appeal court.

It was generally believed that due to the fact that Cook and Fears escaped with a life sentence, no appeal would be made, but Springer says positively that the appeal will be made. "They are not guilty," he asserts, "and the upper court is bound to find in their favor."

Frank Shelton, third member of the alleged murder trio, on whose guilt or innocence the jury was unable to agree, will go to trial again, probably June 5. At least this date has been tentatively set and only unforeseen developments can change the date of the trial. That the Shelton trial will be much more sensational than the previous hearing, despite the fact that the state will use all of the testimony introduced at the previous trial, is stated by both sides and defense attorneys. The state, it is said, besides using all its old testimony, will introduce a great deal of new testimony. The defense, at the previous trial, did not introduce a bit of testimony as to Shelton, but Springer says that the coming trial several sensations will be sprung. The trial will last fully as long as the first hearing, according to attorneys.

LOOT FICHER CLOTHING STORE

Three Suspects Arrested and Held for Investigation.

Special to The World.

FICHER, May 5.—Merchandise to the value of about $200 was stolen from the Livingston store in this city Tuesday night by burglars who effected an entrance by breaking in a rear window, and who made their get-away without being discovered or leaving any clue to their identity.

The loot consisted of dry goods and clothing, and was carried off, presumably, in a Ford car. Police officials are investigating the circumstances, and it is reported that three suspects have been arrested and are being held for investigation.
